leave the State of Michigan and to the Republicans, while with a green back plank it could be counted Democratic. It would represent more than one million. Greenback would not do this. I shall have to go before them and tell them I came into the Democratic Convention and was elected like a fool." He affirmed that the Government alone had power to issue money.

In regard to labor, he said that labor and capital should be allowed to intermix between them, out not to be separated by brute force, but that tribunals should be formed where their differences could be settled. He also declared that the letter toward the Chinese, and declared that it was the importation of foreign labor which had ruined the country, according to the letter, the Chinese were to be banished over the ocean. He also declared that the British Consul, who walked at the committee printed by the six companies.

A vote was taken on Butler's plank, but when decided to add the plank formulated by the sub-committee, plant by plank. It starts out by declaring that a change is necessary in the way the party is managed, and that it should be in the hands of one party for the length of time that the Republicans have been in power, and that the Democratic party, as now before, has control. The committee, however, has placed before the committee the worst elements of the party. Another plank declares that a Democratic President was elected in 1876 and that the country would be better had he not been elected, by the lavish use of money, bestowed by the Republicans. The following extract is from a speech of Mr. Butler's: "I have a desire to allow the amendment, and another plank declares that unnecessary taxation is unfair taxation; that the taxes should be reduced to the lowest possible limit, with a view to the reduction of the public expenses and the reduction of the Democratic party to a revision of the constitution, so that the country will be the better." The next one goes on to committee into a wingate. It repeats the reduction of the tariff, not to injure trade, but to allow the country to compete with all so as to be able to compete with foreign labor. Articles of luxury were to be taxed high while three salars should come in as low as possible. The bill was referred to the Committee on Finance, and was voted down on his first vote quickly, declaring that the plank affirmed nothing, another plank was introduced, more specific, and the three o'clock the committee voted in favor of the wingate. General Butler said he would submit his views to the convention in the form of a minority report.

Convention Bulletins.

A Ballot Reached at Midnight--Cleveland Receives 392 Votes

--The Convention Adjourns until 10 a.m. this morning.

10:26 p.m. --Converse, of Ohio, has taken the stand to endorse part of Butler's platform. He said all members of the sub committee were agreed on the majority platform except one. It is understood that one is Watterson, of Kentucky, who will next take the floor. He said the great thing was determination in platform to reform all the evils of the present government, which governed labor and all questions.

11:00 p.m. --Watterson takes the stand, and is received with cheers. He said the revenue plan was framed after a full discussion, and was one on which all could stand.

11:23 p.m. --Butler moved to substitute part of his report relative to the tariff for that relative to the same subject in majority report. The motion was lost--ayes, 903, nays, 665.

11:40 p.m. --The majority report was adopted almost unanimously, and a motion to proceed to ballot for candidate for president, carried.

11:51 p.m. --Motion to suspend order of business and take recess until to morrow. Call of states ordered. The motion was lost.

12:00 p.m. --Delegation had not voted. Great excitement, although the vote had been cast in negative.

12:07 p.m. --Call of states ordered for members of national committee and committee to notify candidates of their nomination.

9:06 p.m. --Call of states and territories on national and notifying committee, completed.

9:08 p.m. --Resolution that chairman of the national committee be selected from outside of committee, if it seems advisable to do so, was adopted.

9:01 p.m. --Butler takes the platform amid great cheering. He is in full evening dress.

9:14 p.m. --Resolution offered that two third rule should hereafter be abrogated and discontinued, so that will of majority may prevail, and national committee shall so instruct in their next call. The call of states was ordered amid great confusion.

9:19 p.m. --Point of order made that this convention cannot make rules for next convention.

9:17 p.m. --An amendment to postpone resolution indefinitely made and roll of states ordered on amendment.

9:21 p.m. --Amendment to resolution carried.

9:22 p.m. --Col. Morrison has taken the platform to present report of committee on resolutions. Great cheering.

9:30 p.m. --Reading of platform proceeding. So far it is an arrangement of party in power.

9:40 p.m. --The platform pledges the democratic party to revise the tariff in a spirit of fairness to all in interests. In making reductions of areas it is not proposed to injure any domestic industries. All taxation shall be limited to the requirements of an economical government. The platform favors the repeal of all laws restricting the free action of all. It believes the public lands should be kept as homesteads for actual settlers. That the government should care for and improve the Mississippi river. That instead of the republican party's limited policy it demands in behalf of American democracy an American policy.

9:50 p.m. --Butler's minority report decides that certain duties must be carefully adjusted to promote American enterprise and industries and foster American labor. The report favors labor tribunals to settle controversies between capital and labor. It favors federal support to common schools, opposes sales or grants of public lands to corporations.

tions or foreigners. It opposes civil service which creates a cast of life long offices. Favors law to regulate inter-state commerce and regulates rates, freight and passenger. Endorses issue of legal tender currency and opposes any interference with it.

9:58 p.m. --Morrison said discussions on resolutions must be confined to an hour, when he would move the previous question.

10:16 p.m. --Butler has taken the stand, and under the arrangement has half an hour to speak.

10:20 p.m. --Butler said he came here representing a million and a half of men, and demanded that their rights and wants should be considered in the question of taxation.

10:21 p.m. --Butler said if it took the majority thirty-six hours to find out what they wanted, how could his laboring men understand what was meant. It was not plain enough as to their rights and interests.

10:23 p.m. --Butler asked them to read the tariff plank, and see if that could tell what it meant. If it meant protection, Morrison was too honest a man to present it.

10:27 p.m. --Butler said the result of the election depended on this plank--that it is the same now as when it broke the back of the brave soldier four years ago. He denounced civil service reform, and said that under it Washington could not have passed for $1,200 clerkship. He appealed to the convention to amend the tariff so as to not only protect, but to foster and cherish the interests of the working men and women of this country.

10:46 p.m. --Converse, of Ohio, has taken the stand to endorse part of Butler's platform. He said all members of the sub committee were agreed on the majority platform except one.
